The mechanism of action

Silver is a metal that oxidizes immediately when exposed to oxygen to produce silver ions. These ions are responsible for killing germs.

One of the methods of disinfecting the injection site to prevent infection at the injection site is the use of alcohol. However, the use of alcohol may cause skin allergies or complications due to its use. This solution is specific for disinfection before injection. Instead of alcohol, it is able to kill a wide range of pathogenic microorganisms in a maximum of 5 minutes and prevent infection of the injection site.

This product is odorless, alcohol-free, non-irritating and non-toxic, and does not have the usual allergies caused by alcohol on the skin.

In this product, single nanoparticles with dimensions of 20 nanometers have been used.
